"..Blt. 1873 by H.H. Richardson for the Brattle-Sq. Unitarian Society (founded 1699; dissolved 1876) and in 1882 was acquired by the First Baptist society (founded 1665). Its chief feature is the majestic bell tower 176' high, w/ an upper belt of colossal sculptures designed by Bartholdy & representing Baptism, Communion, Marriage and Death, with the angels of judgment at the angles blowing golden trumpets. The interior has rose-windows & a basilica roof. The tower is so beautiful that a number of gentlemen bought the empty church in 1881, w/ the idea of tearing down the main bldg. & replacing it with a little park, out of which the tower should rise alone, like an Italian campanile.

Located on John Eliot Square and dedicated in 1804. An outstanding example of the Federal Meetinghouse style; the oldest frame church in Boston. Retains all of its original features excepting the steeple which was replaced after the hurricane of 1954. Church and grounds are listed on the National Register of Historic Places. A (Boston) landmark petition was submitted to the Boston Landmark Commission in April 1987 and is pending action.

Boston. Churches. Hanover St. Church

Church built by group of dissenters of the New North Church, further up the street from St. Stephen's.

Because of a 172 lb. weathercock hammered out of brass kettles, it was called the Cockerell Church. It is said that the day it was set up, a "merry fellow" climbed the spire, straddled the rooster & crowed insolently at the mother church. Its nickname, Revenge Church had a lively career & a bad end.

Designed for a site in the Roxbury neighborhood by Boston firmSteffian Bradley and Saudi Arabian architect Sami Angawi, it is full of references to centuries-old Islamic landmarks, including a row of peaked arches at street level and a 140-foot-tall minaret. In classic New England style, it's also wrapped entirely in red brick."
